JAPANESE ADVANCE

ARMY IN POSITION TO OPEN THE

CAMPAIGN. Fighting at the Yalu Within a Week Is Predicted-Doubt About Moves Elsewhere Russians Expect Early Attack -Americans at Newchwang Ask Protection-Japanese Editor Russian Spy. Despatches from Japan, Corea and Russia indicate that the opening of the land campaign is near. The Japanese censor yesterday allowed correspondents to hint at an early movement of the army, and Russian military authorities admit that they do not think the enemy will delay the advance much longer.

However, there is still great doubt about the Japanese plan. It is admitted that a large force is ready to move from Anju, western Corea, to the Yalu. Russian cavairy will delay this movement as much as possible without coming to a general engagement until the river is reached.

One correspondent declares that a large force is massed on the northeastern boundary of Corea to strike across Manchuria toward Harbin, the Russian base. This would mean a march of several hundred miles over a difficult country, and is a doubtful undertaking. Other correspondents look for a landing near the mouth of the Yalu to flank the Russians or threaten Port Arthur from the rear.

Newchwang, on the other side of the Liaotung peninsula, also expects an attack. American residents there have appealed to Minister Conger, at Pekin, for a warship to protect them.

JAPAN READY TO STRIKE.

opening of the Land Campaign Looked For in a Week.

Special Cable Despatch to THE SUN. LONDON, March 24 .- If to-day's newspaper despatches are reliable the advance of the Japanese army northward may be expected very soon. The Nagasaki correspondent of the Express says that the censorship allows him to state that the War Department has now completed all the details for the movement of the main columns for the invasion of Manchuria. It is stated that a great force has been massed for an advance on Harbin, starting from the mouth of the Tumen River below Possiet Bay. This is at the northeastern junction of Corea and Man-

Heavy columns are also concentrated had provided for her in his will. north of Ping Yang for an offensive move on the Yalu River.

The Tokio correspondent of the Daily Mail says he understands that operations will begin about a week hence with an advance on the Yalu River.

The correspondent of the Telegraph at Secul predicts that the censorship will be relaxed early in April, which may be interpreted as confirming the reports of an imperding forward movement.

JAPAN'S PREPARATIONS.

The correspondent of the Telegraph cabling from Chefoo, gives a further account of the Japanese preparations. He says he went on a steamer from Chinnampho. on March 13, and found that every landing place on the northern coast of Corea has been appropriated by the Japanese, in readiness for the breaking up of the ice.

The commissary department is very active throughout the country, buying and storing rice and other supplies, but the great poverty of the Coreans and the shortness of food among them makes the work difficult. There are only means for supplying 90,000 men in Cores. To increase the number there would entail great dif-

Hence it is supposed that the Japanese intend to make their main military movement elsewhere, using the Corean advance as a diversion. They hold two enormously strong positions at Ping Yang and south of the Miokaksan Mountains, between Hwangju and Seoul. The latter position is probably impregnable. It secures Seoul from attack from the northwest.

The Russians, when they moved south from the Yalu River, intended to make Anju their base, as they expected heavy reenforcements. These did not arrive, and the Russian General retired, fearing that his retreat might be cut off by the breaking up of the ice in the river. There were only 250 Japanese at Ping Yang when the Russians approached, and the latter could have easily captured the town.

ARMY HAS SUPPERED.

The correspondent describes the Japanese as moving on Ping Yang from Seoul by forced marches. They carried the lightest possible equipments, and had no tents. They often bivouscked in the snow covered fields.

The commissary preparations were very thorough. Supply stations and medical depots line the route, but the poverty of the country is a constant source of trouble. A European army must have starved in similar conditions. The force is deficient in artillery, but is otherwise admirably equipped.

The troops are full of spirit despite the terrible weather and the prevalence of dysentery and pneumonia. The cavalry horses have little endurance, and many of them have died. The transport horses are good.

BUILDING BRIDGES

The work of placing a bridge across the river at Anju is proceeding rapidly. Until it is completed an advance is impossible. The Russians are constructing a pontucn bridge acress the Yalu River near Wiju.

M'CARREN JUMPS THE FENCE.

INVADES DOYLE'S DISTRICT AND MAKES A SPEECH.

Says He Is Warranted to Do So in Order to Maintain Independence of Brooklyn Democracy-A Big Crowd Cheers and Kenneth F. Sutherland Listens.

Senator Patrick H. McCarren came down from Albany last night and personally inraded the Seventh Assembly district in an effort to depose at the primaries next Tuesday William A. Doyle, the present Democratic leader of the district, who is the man hosen by Tammany Hall as the dispenser of Democratic patronage in Kings county. The immediate occasion for Senator McCarren's invasion was a mass meeting held in Pabst's Loop Hotel. Coney Island. by the supporters of Thomas F. Wogan, whom McCarren and his friends have pitted against Doyle in the fight for the leader-

Senator McCarren, in a speech forty minutes long, admitted that it was unusual for the leader of the central organization in Kings to interfere personally in fights for supremacy among district leaders, but the present instance, he said, warranted such interference. For the fight in the Seventh, he asserted, was not a matter of personalities or individualities, but involved the very existence of the Brooklyn Democracy as an independent organization. He had come into the Seventh district, he said, in the same capacity in which a cat would come to protect her kittens.

Senator McCarren, amid the greatest enthusiasm of the big audience, declared that he was the chosen leader of the Democracy in Kings, and that every attempt of the Tammany leaders in Manhattan to make anybody else leader by a mere act of appointment would surely fail, just as it would fail in the case of Doyle.

"I want to impress upon the voters in this ssembly district," said Senator McCarren. that an invasion is being attempted, that we are threatened with destruction by an outside political organization. We are threatened with disruption and disintegration. Mr. Doyle, the accredited leader of this Assembly district at present, publicly stated that he had been selected to take charge of the Democratic party of this county and to be the official patronage dispenser.

monthly sum for Grace's support and to "No man can be appointed leader of the give the girl $10,000 when she was 18. When party in Kings county. I was not appointed leader of the party in Kings; I was elected she reached that age the father agreed to to the place by men chosen under the primary law, and as soon as they want to get rid of me all they'll have to do is to notify me and I'll resign. | Cries of 'Never!

"I want to say that Mr. Doyle is attempting the impossible. Mr. Doyle, as sure as the sun will rise to-morrow, will fail in his effort to hand over this organization to any organization outside the confines of he county."

Senator McCarren said that the Democracy of Brooklyn did its part nobly in the last municipal election, but that since the election the Democracy of Kings has been regarded as "an annex or a tail to Tammany Hall" by a good many men belonging to hat organization in New York county. Mr. McCarren said that he had taken every opportunity to repudiate that idea. War, e said, had been made on the Brooklyn organization merely because it was fighting for the maintenance of its independence and individuality.

If the Kings county Democracy should ubmit to the appointment of a leader by Tammany, Senator McCarren said, it would be possible for Tammany to change the leader every day in the week and twice on Sunday. "Smith might succeed Doyle and lones Smith and so on" without regard to the wishes of Kings county Democrats Tammany, Senator McCarren suggested, might, if it wanted to, even appoint Tim Woodruff or Mr. Dady as patronage dis-teach the great college game in connection Kings county Democrats, he said, ought to cooperate with Democrats in the other counties in an effort to bring about a sucessful Democratic administration.

"But," said he, "our relationship with the organization ceases when we come to the election of State officers and candidates for Federal positions. Then we have the right to stand on our own prerogative, to assert our own principles and to express our own views. That duty we reserve to ourselves; that duty we do not delegate to anybody."

Senator McCarren when he concluded was cheered for five minutes. In the audience very attentive listener to what Senator McCarren had to say was Kenneth F. Sutherland, John Y. McKane's former lieutenant, who, even to-day, is considerable of a power in Coney Island and who resterday declared that he would throw his influence in favor of Doyle. Others of Doyle's followers were in the hall, but they said nothing.

VOTING MACHINE LOBBY.

Working for the Bill Compelling the Use

ALBANY, March 23.-A persistent lobby has been working about the Legislature for some weeks to secure a favorable report on Senator Davis's bill revising the election law regarding the use of voting machines. The bill contained a provision doing away with the power of local authorities in cities to use voting machines and provided instead that the Secretary of State, the Comptroller and the Attorney-General shall constitute a board to compel the use of voting nachines in cities.

The bill is aimed principally at New York city, in which there are 1.541 election districts, which would mean an expenditure for voting machines of $850,000.

The Senate Judiciary Committee to-day decided to report the bill favorably, but struck out the provision referred to, so that those who are lobbying for these provisions will lose a commission of about $250,000 unless the Senate restores them.

POINTS SCORED ON BURTON.

LETTER FROM THE SENATOR READ AT HIS TRIAL.

Used His Influence in Washington for the Rialto Company-Said He Would Be Notified of Any Action Against It -Asked for His First Month's Pay.

ST. Louis March 23 -In the trial of Senator Burton of Kansas before the United States District Court this afternoon the Government scored three points: First, in getting before the jury letters to and from Senator Burton, showing his acknowledgment that he had, while in Washington as a United States Senator, got information and promises from the Post Office Department favorable to the Rialto Grain and Securities Company.

Second, in getting before the jury, as evidence, the five checks for $500 each from the Rialto company, which were cashed by Senator Burton, and the opinion of Judge Adams that these checks, though cashed in Washington, were really paid in St

Third, in securing the ruling of the Court although Judge Adams said that the matter was one for the jury to determine, that Senator Burton had admitted over his own signature that he had used his influence as a United States Senator in behalf of the company.

The fight against the introduction of the checks was bitter and the arguments lasted for two hours. They followed the introduction, soon after the beginning of the afternoon session, of two lettersone from Attorney Harlan, the St. Louis attorney for the Rialto company, and the reply from Senator Burton.

Mr. Harlan, in his letter dated St. Louis, Nov. 18, 1902, said that Senator Burton's proposition to become general counsel of the company had been accepted. It then reviewed the fact that C. H. Brooks, whom Major Dennis, president of the Rialto company succeeded, was, the writer thought, in trouble with the Grand Jury here.' Harlan said that Brooks tried to "hold up" Dennis for $25,000, and added: "I do not know whether any complaints against Dennis or Brooks have been received by the Post Office Department. But I think it advisable for you to find out whether any have reached there. If you can find out whether the matter has gone to the Department, it will aid us here.'

The letter from Senator Burton, in reply to Mr. Harlan's letter, dated at Washington, Nov. 20, said

Your letter of Nov. 18 received. I called Department and found two complaints against your company-one by Miss Belle Evans and the other by Miss Kate Hauts of Albany, N. Y. They were sent from the main office to the post office inspector in St. Louis on Nov. 7. If the inspector has not called, he will probably do so in a short time.

I should like to be advised about com plaints. It should be your motto to satisfy complaints at this time. Have arranged with the Department in case any complaints sured the Department that your company will comply with the law. No action will be taken against you without me being advised, and I shall be informed of any hearings before the Post Office Department. In return, if agreeable, you will please make remittances for my first month's salary. Yours J. R. BURTON.

F. R. Fravel, a clerk in the Agricultural Department, testified to having sent a communication to the Post Office Department asking for an investigation of the Rialto company. Blain W. Turner, chief clerk in the Post Office Department, testified to the receipt by the Department of the letter mentioned by all the previous witness George W. Smith, clerk in the office of the chief post office inspector, testified to the receipt of the letters referred to, giving their classification.

After the Government had completed ts efforts to establish the fact that letters of complaint were on file in the Post Office Department at the time of Senator Burton's employment by the Rialto company, Ernest H. Kastor, an employee he Rialto company and personal friend of Senator Burton, was called to show direct connection between the Senator and the Rialto company. He proved a somewhat reluctant witness, but in the main his testimony strengthened the case of the Government.

CHASED ON A LOCOMOTIVE. Three Burglars Caught Near Wilkesharre

After & Four Hours Hunt. WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 23 .- A four hours chase, ending with a dash on a locomotive, resulted in the capture this morn ing at Falling Springs, near here, of three men suspected of many robberies. They were first seen late last night break ing into Louis Heineman's meat marke at Pittston. Heineman frightened them and they ran toward Pittston Junction. Heineman got a policeman and followed, and half an hour later found the men in Bolan's store at Upper Pittston. Again they fled before they could be caught, and for fifteen minutes they were pursued up the Lehigh Valley Railroad tracks, finally disappearing among the cars at Coxton yards.

A general alarm was then sent out and t 2 o'clock this morning a telegraph operaor at Falling Springs, several miles up the road, reported them near there. A force of officers was sent up on a special engine and caught them.

LIKE RESTORING DEAD TO LIFE. Pulseless Heart Exposed and Set Going Again by Manipulation.

PHILADELPHIA, March 28 .- Dr. W. W. Keen to-night described to the County Medical Society a remarkable method of restoring life in cases of apparent death from chloroform collapse during surgical operations by massaging the heart. He declared that the proper course was to expose the heart at once and proceed to restore its action by artificial means.

Twenty-seven cases in which this course had been taken were instanced. Of these there were four recoveries. One specific case was given in detail. The heart had ceased to heat for two minutes and to all appearances life was extinct.

The heart was exposed, a hand inserted into the cavity about it so as to exert pressure from the inside while with the other a similar pressure was exerted from the outside.

In all four recoveries the patient was as good as dead when the massage was resorted to.

HOW HUBBARD MET HIS DEATH

TOLD IN LETTER OF HIS COM-

The letter, which has been copyrighted by Miss A. D. Wallace, is in part as follows: NORTHWEST RIVER, LABRADOR,

Before this reaches you my telegram, hat I will send forward by the mail carrier to be transmitted to you by cable from hateau Bay, the nearest telegraph office, will have been received by you, and you will know of Mr. Hubbard's sad death, but not, until you receive this, the details. But before going into the details of that, I will say that I am in perfect health-better health, I think, than ever before in my life-with the exception of a frezen toe that has taken long to heal.

To-morrow morning, Dec. 4, I leave here for a lumber camp on Goose Bay, or near it, at the mouth of Grand River, to see the only physician within several hundred miles.

Now to the story of our terrible experience in this awful country. The story is too long to go into details in a letter. I will merely say that we plunged madly into the interior of an unknown country, into regions never before trod by white man, with almost us provisions. For our trip we should have had at least 550 pounds of flour-we had 120 pounds; we should have taken 200 pounds of bacon or pork-we had 25 pounds; and so on all down the line. On July 15 we left Northwest River, and on Aug. 1 were practically out of provisions. We were soaked to the skin nearly every day until the middle of September. and often slept in wet clothes and wet

Sept. 15 none of us went into camp a single night with dry feet, yet none of us had a cold or any indication of one. As I stated. our food supply was exhausted early in August. On Aug. 3 we killed four geese, on Aug. 12 a big stag caribou; from that forward we lived on the caribou meat which we had dried, but which was soon gone, and at long intervals a goose or duck or grouse we succeeded in killing with our rifles or pistols and fish we caught with our rods.

Early in September the weather grew too sold for the fish to bite. Until then we did very well, but after that we often were without anything to eat and our meals were simply tea. Our salt and sugar were gone early and we ate everything boiled and drank the water our food was boiled in. Birds, like grouse, ducks, &c., were eaten wholly, heads, entrails, feet and everything but the feathers, and every part of the fish. At length, about the middle some large lake away in the interior. From a high, barren hill the great lake

Before we began our retreat from the big lake. I had lost thirteen inches in walst measure. Our bones were sticking through the skin. We had not shaved or cut our hair and our appearance must have been pitiable. I know the others looked, especially Hubbard, like walking skeletons. We were so weak at length that we could not sit down without falling. All along the route we had left portions of our outfit until it was reduced to the absolute necessaries. . . At length one day Hubbard could not carry his little pack into camp, and I made him put it down and follow without any load. I returned and got his pack. The next day, Oct. 17, was the same. He could go no further. We pitched the tent, made im lie down and George [the Cree guide] and I got together wood for a fire. We were eighty miles from Northwest River, but at the head of Grand Lake, forty miles away, we hoped to find some trappers and

On the way up, some twelve miles below where Hubbard gave out, we had left a bag with some remnants of wet flour in it. We hoped to get some help from that. After making camp and lighting our fire, we had a consultation, and it was decided that we should leave our caribou bones [which they carried to make soup] and some pieces of flour bag I found (thrown away on the way up), with some lumps of mouldy flour sticking to it, for Hubbard, and George and I go on the next morning to the flour bag we had abandoned, hoping to find some flour in it. I sat up nearly all night keeping the fire going to warm Hubbard, and the next morning, after getting some wood and wrapping Hubbard in my blankets, George and I started. (Hubbard was able to walk about camp.) Before going I read the xiv. chapter of John, and at his request my favorite chapter xiii. of First Corinthians.

I somehow felt that I would never see him alive again, and it was very hard to go. We had grown very close to each other in the summer and during our severe hardships, and endeavored always to lighten each other's load, and I felt toward him as a brother. I tried to turn to him several times to say good-by, but felt each time myself breaking down, and for a long time sat with my back to him. Then George said we must start. I turned to say to him what I felt was the last farewell, and in spite of my efforts broke down and sobbed

BUFFALO BILL ACCUSES WIFE!

Says She Tried to Poison Him in Rochester, N. Y., in 1900.

DENVER, Col., March 23.-Col. W. F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill," appeared before a notary here to-day to give his deposition in the divorce suit he began recently in Wyoming. Mrs. Cody was represented by attorneys who cross-examined Col. Cody sharply, the inquiry lasting until late this evening, when Col. Cody left for New York and England.

"Mrs. Cody tried to poison me three years ago," he testified. "She had frequently threatened to do it, but on this occasion she tried to carry out her threat. It was no fault of hers that she did not succeed. We were visiting in Rochester, N. Y., during the holidays of 1900, and the day after Christmas I was ill. I supposed the turkey and plum pudding did not agree with me.

"Anyhow, I was sick and she said she would fix me up. She nearly fixed me completely. She pretended to give me medicine. It was poison. It almost finished me, for I was unconscious for some time. think it must have been an overdose, for it made me throw it off and I suppose this saved my life.

"She drove my friends away. She made herself so disagreeable that I finally gave up trying to entertain my friends at North Platte. I could no longer in self-respect subject guests in my home to insults at the hands of my wife. I haven't been there for two years on this account. When my friends were no longer welcome in th handsome residence I built and elaborately furnished, it was no longer my home." Col. Cody went into details and recited many instances of his wife's discourtesy to his friends. Mrs. Cody's counsel inquired into the character of the guests to whom she objected, to show that men whom he brought to the house were a riotous set and behaved in such a manner that she had the right to object to them.

against her father's refusal to pay her what he owed. He still refused to pay and threatened to cut her out of his will if she bothered him.
Mr. Gallatin's defence to-day in court was that the agreement made with his first wife was voluntary and without consideration, and that under the law he isn't obliged to carry it out. Mrs. Seton lives in New York, and her deposition, which included copies of many letters, was read in court.

Mr. Gallatin is a Sacramento banker who has lost much property in recent years. MUST TEACH FOOTBALL.

New Requirement in Minnesota School for Instructors of the Children. MINNEAPOLIS, March 23.—Ability to teach ootball is to be one of the requirements of men teachers throughout the State next fall Students at the university desiring teachers' places are being asked if they can with the regular studies. The desire to secure such teachers is fostered by increasing interest in the game in the smaller towns and according to the rules in force in many parts of the State a football coach must be a regularly hired eacher in the school.

Many of the present university seniors are planning to teach next fall and the football requirement may cause some of them to take special work during the spring with members of the football squad as tutors. COUNTERFEITERS AT WORK.

Circulating Spurious Notes on the National City Bank of This City. MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., March 23 .- Counterfeiters are working the smaller towns of Orange and Sullivan counties and a large number of counterfeit five-dollar notes have been passed. It is believed that the notes are manufactured within a short distance of New York and that Italian laborers are employed as shovers of the

of New York and are good counterfeits.

A large number of them were worked off
